Enrile says FG need not come to reply to WB rigging claims

By Michael Lee Utac and TJ Burgonio

SENATE PRESIDENT JUAN PONCE ENRILE yesterday said President Macapagal-Arroyo's husband Jose Miguel "Mike" Arroyo should break his silence on bribery allegations concerning the purported rigged bidding for World Bank-funded road projects.

In an interview with radio station DWL, Enrile said there were many ways to rebut such allegations. "In case he can answer that, and I encourage him to confront it, as to reply to it," Enrile said.

Also over the air, Sen. William Dolorico-Santiago said Mike Arroyo should welcome the initiation of his committee on economic affairs as a chance to clear his name.

"If the First Gentleman is really innocent, he should even welcome this opportunity to explain why the allegations against him are untrue. Now, if he has committed a wrongdoing, he will take it against me, but I can't do anything. I'm just doing my job," she said.

Green roofs: Couple says idea good for environment

By Ross Harper Alonzo Contributor

WHEN FILIPINOS PREFACE TO build their dream homes, their architectural plans don't usually include roofs designed to hold soil ready for planting.

At least not yet.

Christopher Rastinger and wife, Agnes Calda, hope to create a home in the country with green roofing, an ecological concept where roofs are intentionally planted with vegetation.

Green roofs have revolutionized buildings because they utilize wasted space and help fight global warming. The concept has become popular in Europe, the United States, Australia and even Asia.

"When we were planning a visit to Manila, I was trying to decide on some technology or innovation I could bring from Munich that would help both the environment and the health of Filipinos," says Agnes. "Christopher and I agreed that starting a green roof advocacy would be an excellent way to give back to the country even if we don't live here anymore."

Dr. Pacman: Honorary doctorate roils academe

By Alex Pal and Irene R. Sira Cruz
Beginner Theorist

DUMAGUETE CITY—CEN'S SOUTH-western University (SWU) has decided to confer an honorary doctorate on boxing champion Manny Pacquiao on

Feb. 18, but at least two educators here are opposing the idea.

Dr. Apolinario Mojat, dean of the graduate school of Foundation University, said a former chair of the Philippine Sports Commission, said on Friday that while Pacquiao had brought honor to the country through his victories in boxing, the planned conferment on him of a doctorate in human kinship (honoris causa) might be a violation of a policy of the Commission on Higher Education (CHED).

"No entry can award an honorary doctorate in human kinship," said Mojat, who was also a dean of the University of the Philippines' College of Human Kinetics.

He cited CHED Memorandum Order 52 series of 1996, which limits the con-

Enrile seeks release of other Ninoy killers

By Michael Livonius and Marlon Reyes

SENATE FREIGHTER ALIAS FORCE leader yesterday called for the release of the convicted murderers of the late Sen. Benigno "Ninoy" Aquino Jr. and Imelda Marcos and suggested that the Aquino family should turn their anger on the lawmakers' intransigence.

Enrile made the call following the release on Friday of two senators convicted in the celebrated 1983 double-murder case, Eduardo Verano and Baldozar Caramelo, after the former senators served out their 34-year terms.

Enrile commented that 18 other convicted soldiers who were still waiting for a commutation of their life sentences were "prisoners" who should be freed after "longstanding wait for justice."

Without a commutation, the 18 will have to serve their jail terms until 2014.

In an interview with premier radio station dZDS-Only News, Enrile said former President Corason Aquino and his family should concentrate by now that the soldiers still in prison were not the mainstays of the administration of the opposition leader.

"They should all be freed. They are just prisoners, why are they suffering while those who committed the crime are outside?"

Enrile said he would be known if the Aquino family knew the identities of the military intransigents.

"I don't know. I haven't asked because I don't talk to them. But if I were the president of the Philippines,

I should know about it," said Enrile, referring to his Aquino's 40-year stay in Washington.

"Why wouldn't you know who murdered your husband? If you don't know that, what kind of a president were you?" he asked, adding that his Aquino should have made finding the killers his top priority.

Meanwhile, De Guzman and Tavares may have to wait before they could fully enjoy their newfound freedom after being advised by state lawyers to stay in the FBI offices in Queens City because of threats to their lives. SENED Chief Marcelo Abante said he doubted now in living the two former soldiers in a hospital, saying they should suffer the fate of the two winners of the Aquino-Garcia case who died of "unofficial" ailments a few years ago.

GMA to convene job summit tomorrow

By T. Bergman

FRESH FROM NEW YORK ARRIVAL, President Managlap-Ayala is to convene a job summit in Washington tomorrow to "for members' government and private responses to growing unemployment."

The day-long summit will gather representatives of government, business and labor and other stakeholders to discuss job preservation and creation and safety nets for laid-off workers.

The idea is to bring a national consensus on "how to protect jobs, create jobs and secure so much job security in this time of crisis," Press Secretary Grace Remonde said in an interview earlier this month.

"There are a lot of proposals from the various sectors. That's why we need to come together to forge common front on job security," he said.

Dissemination

Labor officials had projected that as many as 300,000 could lose their jobs by June.

Benigno Aquino, an economics professor at the University of the Philippines and a former budget secretary, had forecast more factory closures and layoffs, higher unemployment rates and, worse, lower foreign direct investments and lower job opportunities in the past.

His Aquino is scheduled to fly in this morning from the United States. The last leg of his journey, New York to Manila, will be a 10-hour flight. He is expected to arrive in Manila on Saturday.

He had earlier ordered Labor Secretary Mañalac to convene the summit to respond to the call of the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines, lawmakers and other workers, according to Remonde.

The summit, called "Saving Jobs by Saving Industries," is jointly organized by the labor and trade unions.

"I'll start by listening to government and private sector leaders in response to the results of the workers and business affected by the global financial crisis," Acting Labor Secretary Rosalinda Baldoz said in an interview on Friday.

Leaders in business, private universities, food, recreation, tourism, health and consumer goods, health, welfare and medical sectors and agriculture, as well as representatives of the public works, health and environment departments, local government units, the armed forces and police, will discuss job creation.

The subject of job preservation will be addressed by local and international chambers of commerce, business organizations, company CEOs, engineers, managers and representatives of the international union confederations.

Representatives of the labor department, Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA), Social Security System (SSS), Government Service Insurance System (GSIS), Philippine Health Insurance Corp. (PHIC), and National Anti-Doping Agency (NADA), among others, will submit policy notes.

Catching their breath

Despite the mounting challenges, granted to 100 Filipino workers laid off from factories in Taiwan, only a few have gone on to upgrade their skills in Taiwan's training centers.

"They are not in a hurry to be trained. They're still catching their breath," Trade Development Council of the Philippines (TDCP) and Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) said in a joint statement on Thursday.

Early in December, his former governor of the laid-off factory workers a package of assistance that included referrals for job placement, financial aid, and health insurance. The Philippine Overseas Employment Administration, and local assistance from the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration.

Whale sharks now venture into Batangas fresh waters

By Rhea Paga

FOR THE FIRST time, the giant whale sharks, locally known as "balinging," are venturing into the fresh waters of the Batangas province.

Under Batangas Vice Mayor Fredy Pineda's special message, the municipal government is conducting a campaign to educate the residents of Batangas, and encourage environmental awareness and respect for the marine resources in the area.

MOBILE SOLUTION gains community n

Community empowerment can come in small packages like a SIM card. Such is the might of mobile communications today that "centrally organized homogenous individuals" – defined as a community – can have easier lives through simple text messaging.

With the development, change is coming to Filipino communities here and overseas. An imaginative Web-based solution introduced by SMART Communications is bringing that change to students, teachers and overseas Filipinos as well as the government.

Called the SMART Community Solution, the complete mobile application put together by a composite SMART team, is driven by two main components – a Web-based messaging service called INPHOBARD and a Community SIM. It allows for various text or short messaging service (SMS) facilities that offer national income and lower community calling rates. It has different functions and capabilities catering to the needs of a specific organization or community.

So well-timed and effective the SMART solution was to the communities that it has been nominated to the prestigious 2009 GSM Global Mobile Awards which will be held in Barcelona, Spain next week.

"Creating an innovative service for our customers and enabling them to benefit from it while enhancing our revenue generation capability are rewards in themselves," said SMART Chief

Executive Officer

Adrian Orlano, who informed about the nomination.

Filipino ingenuity

The solution initially focuses on schools, overseas Filipinos, Filipino workers (OFWs) and local government units (LGUs), and seeks to empower these communities through a streamlined communication system.

It also aims to provide better communication through special calling rates and offers, and intends to provide cost efficiency in the community with real-time communication.

Developed jointly by at least five SMART units, the web-based group broadcast service is made up of five major components that allow calling and texting functions relevant to the communities. They also offer special rates and various services customized for groups of individuals concerned.

"This community solution is a product of Filipino ingenuity and it should be a source of great pride not only for SMART but also for the entire nation," said SMART Head of Wireless Division Danilo S. Mojica.

As a public service, SMART offers the set-up and customization of the solution free of charge.

Reaching out to schools

Wanted in the University of Baguio early last year, the SMART Community Solution service has been acquired by at least 40 schools nationwide. These include the Philippine Military Academy and Cagayan State University in Cagayan, Farflito Aguinado College in Manila, the University of Negros Occidental-Recoletos in the Visayas, Xavier University in Cagayan de Oro and Ateneo de Zamboanga in Mindanao.

"It is a great source of stimulation for us to actively reach out to educational institutions," said PLDT and SMART Chairman Manuel V. Pangilinan in launching the community solution in schools.

"We are confident that the alliances we have built over the years and the partnership with schools will only push us to excel in what we do, which is to provide the communications infrastructure that will enable schools and other institutions to offer new and innovative services to a wider audience, whenever and wherever possible," he added.

Through the school SIM, students can subscribe to school announcements such as class suspensions and campus events, get grades and other pertinent information, send feedback, and get access to SMART's latest promotion and events.

University of Baguio launched the service a week prior to Typhoon Frank. Because they received the suspension of classes through their School SIM the night before, most of the students were able to stay home warm and dry and, of course, saved up on what would have been a waste of transportation money like in previous typhoons.

Messages can be easily posted on the INPHOBARD using a home computer or mobile phone with Internet connection. The messages can then be picked up through a text query. University of Baguio's IT administrator Jopoy Solano was able to post the "NO CLASSES" bulletin from the comfort of his home, instead of walking through the rain and putting up signboards of the suspension of classes.

With the schools having a free hand in managing content, SMART comes in as the "enabler." The INPHOBARD and the SMART Buddy School SIM work hand in hand, enabling information to be readily accessible anytime, anywhere with students carrying around their mobile phones.

Schools are signing up for the INPHOBARD service that SMART is providing for free. Even the school SIM does not cost students a single centavo. The special rates are easy on the budget at P1, for transactions such as getting grades, school announcements, and feedback.

"We are confident that the alliances we have built over the years and the partnership with schools will only push us to excel in what we do, which is to provide the communications infrastructure that will enable schools and other institutions to offer new and innovative services to a wider audience, whenever and wherever possible."

A good number of University of Baguio students come from surrounding provinces like Pangasinan, Ilocos and La Union. Since the launch, they have been grateful for saving up on transportation costs and travel time just to go up and submit their report cards. Most of them have chosen to go to their grades using their School SIMs, enabling them to enjoy fully their school breaks.

Aside from the recognized benefits, there are other features in the SMART School SIM that make the school own it. The SIM itself carries the school's logo, and the keywords and access codes are designed according to the school's structure and preferences. One school that has benefited from the SMART scheme is University of Batangas (UB), acknowledged as Calabarzon's premier educational facility.

UB president Hermasilo D. Pura has expressed satisfaction in partnering with SMART to develop a modern communication solution "that will help us reach our students, faculty and personnel in the fastest and most efficient way possible."

Government units in the loop

With other government agencies forming partnerships with SMART, one clear beneficiary of the SMART Community Solution is the military now empowered to inform authorities about illegal drug proliferation, get advisories about mines and floods, and even report crimes—all via text or SMS.

In October 2008, SMART and the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) launched the Text Case Project with the tagline—"Don't let drugs control your life, your family, your community. Be Smart."

The web-based application is a secure means for subscribers to provide vital information about illegal drug activities in their locality, and serves to incorporate the large subscriber base of SMART into the intelligence network of PDEA. PDEA Director-General Dionisio E. Santiago pointed out that the project is welcomed on the popularity of SMS or text messaging as a medium of communication. "With the activation of the SMART PDEA Text Hotline 780-PDEA (780-7333), the common mobile phone is transformed into a lethal weapon against drug lords," he added.

A month later, SMART activated its partnership with the Philippine Atmospheric, Geophysical and Astronomical Services (PAGASA) through the PAGASA INFOCARD service.

The service is an effective, timely and wide-reaching weather information dissemination system that makes use of both SMS and the Web in making vital information for disaster preparedness available to mobile phone users any time, anywhere.

Information such as updates on flooding, typhoons, and other weather conditions, that can keep one from harm's way can now be received or accessed in the form of a text message.

"Imagine what we could do to prevent loss of lives and property if all SMART subscribers took advantage of the service," said Perry V. Bujana, head of SMART's sales, business development and institutional services group, during the launch. As he aptly put it, "May PAGASA na po is cell phone natin."

The need to widen the scope of SMS for use in information dissemination was first brought up during a meeting that PAGASA Director Pedro D. Nido attended after the sinking of the MV Princess of the Stars last June. Immediately after, he contacted SMART.

"We hope to avoid similar incidents at sea that cause injury to many of our countrymen. With the InfoCard, people can access practically all of our latest bulletins and advisories. They can then decide on their own whether to postpone or continue with their trip. This kind of service is critical," he said.

Also last year, the Manila Police District launched the 7000PD or 700673 in line with their efforts to be more accessible to Manila residents. The service also gave out security and safety tips.

The text-based service allows the general public to report crimes, accidents, traffic situations, complaints and other issues in the fastest and most affordable way. As a result, the police district became more responsive to the emergency needs of residents.

Apart from these government units, the SMART Community Solution is also being activated in local government units such as Tinasan City in Batangas, Taguig, Marikina, Parangal and San Juan in Metro Manila, Bulacan in Bulacan, and Cainta in Rizal. The application is also now being used by universities, OPWs and even Filipino organizations overseas—bringing them closer to each other. (More accounts on this in the future.)

Global recognition

Now, the Global Mobile Awards Night and Mobile Innovation Global Award Competition unfolded in Barcelona. Among those in attendance will be Majors who handle the division primarily responsible for the development of the SMART Community Solution.

For Mojica, however, the ultimate compliment is the affirmation from students, families of OPWs and ordinary Filipinos who appreciate the benefits of the SMART Community Solution.

SMART is the only Filipino company to be nominated in the prestigious global awards and not only in a single category. It was named in three categories—Best Use of Mobile for Social and Economic Development, Best Broadcast Commercial, and Green Mobile Award. The nominations are proof that the company is responding well to the needs of consumers, which is the bottom-line consideration.

In the company of the world's best, SMART joins the biggest names in telecoms such as Vodafone and AT&T in vying for the highest awards in the field of mobile communications.

Mojica draws inspiration from Rob Conway, CEO and Member of the Board of the GSMA, who said "Mobile communications continue to drive social, economic and technological development, and this becomes even more critical in the economic environment we're living in. To have been shortlisted from the impressive, high-quality field of more than 450 companies that entered is a tremendous achievement."

It is a recognition that makes SMART proud. Most importantly, it is one that brings glory to the nation and assures the mobile communications world that you, the Filipino, can.

Kremlin to allow Afghan shipments through Russia

MOSCOW—RUSSIA GRANTED TRANSIT RIGHTS TO NONLETHAL US military supplies headed to Afghanistan but only after apparently pressuring a former Soviet state to close an air base leased to the Americans.

The signal from Moscow's Kremlin is still being to help in Afghanistan, but only on the Russian terms.

Bygones count: the closure of the Moscow air base on Friday has US officials suspect that Russia was behind the decision, having long been rebuffed by the US pressure to restrict arms.

The Russian decision to let US supplies cross its territory opened another route to those through Pakistan now threatened by militant attacks, but US officials were still left scrambling for alternatives to Pakistan.

Russia wants to open discussions on energy policy issues after Washington and Moscow have clashed on it in recent years—NATO enlargement, missile defense in Europe, a new energy treaty and so on. Russia is also a major supplier of oil to the US.

Russia may also be chasing Pakistan for its position as a major supplier of oil to the US. Russia's position is that Pakistan is a major supplier of oil to the US.

Russian Minister Sergey Lavrov said his country had agreed to allow transit of US nonlethal supplies to Afghanistan.

"We are now waiting for the American partners to provide a specific request with a quantity and description of cargo," Lavrov said in a statement. He also said that the US "has to make sure they do not use the route for other purposes."

He and other officials did not say whether the US will be allowed to use land routes to make up for the loss of the air base, but he said that the route will be used to transport supplies to Afghanistan as well as to other parts of the world.

The Kremlin has just signed a three-week deal with Russia's transit of nonlethal cargo for military bases in Afghanistan and has allowed some alliance facilities, including Germany, France and Spain, to store supplies in its territory.

General routes through Russia would likely cross into Kazakhstan and then Uzbekistan before entering northern Afghanistan.

The US has reached a preliminary deal with Kazakhstan to use its territory and of Russia have said they are considering extending military cooperation with Uzbekistan, which neighbors Afghanistan.

The option is problematic for Pakistan. Uzbekistan linked US forces out of a base there after deep US criticism of the country's human rights record and the government's brutal crushing of a 2005 uprising.

Sunday LIFE STYLE Relationships

There is a Love Institute

"SEEN JUST LIKE VINTAGE, day when I fell in love with my husband. Last year, I encouraged Maribel to put up Maribel Institute, and now I am the managing director of the company," said the Nazareno-Arceles, who herself has been married for almost 15 years now.

Maribel's Love Institute is a second marriage and family counselor. She and Allan have been married for 25 years.

"She and I met with Maribel more than a couple of times before we got married, to prepare for our marriage. She gave us homework and advised us to build off having children for at least one year to enjoy more time with each other."

"This year after our wedding we again sought advice from Maribel and continued to travel to this store to gain more knowledge and skills to prepare our marriage for the trials and challenges that would continue to come. And while we tried to solve,

"Because I am on my fifth year of marriage, and we are frustrated by the need for continuous learning for us to be able to solve in our marriage and to raise our children in a loving home."

With this realization, Pia was inspired to set up the Love Institute with Maribel. It's interesting to find that there is just not enough systematic knowledge for all those who take their relationship seriously.

So Maribel puts it, "Just like any endeavor, we must study to be a doctor, an engineer, a secretary or a politician right. Even in self-counseling or 'supernatural,' we need a few days to several months of training. Some much training do not have to be a bachelor or to be a master? There have to be a lot? Many of my parents who started in the '50s did not have any. It was by trial and error, it was trial. It was a commitment that helped them."

"For nowadays, couples seem to be happy with their parents and not read upon divorce statistics. I agree absolutely and they can have a rich life of education and adequate preparation."

Maribel and Pia teach graduate studies in Family Ministries at Ateneo de Manila University, and years of counseling and training.

The Love Institute has developed programs that will allow you to assess one's love relationship strengths and weaknesses.

THE ARTS COUNCIL PRESIDENT pianist Rudolf Golez, in a casual "titled" "Songs Without Words" at the invitation of the Manila Press. Golez, 39, was a full-time pianist in a former rock band. He's now a soloist in the genre.

His mother, Eulalia "Ode" Golez, said his love of music, giving him piano lessons at the age of three. "But he got started climbing trees at 10, and he got into playing piano at 12," she said. "He's a very happy child when he's with his piano, the love of his life."

Suffering in love

DEAR EMILY,

The 25 and have two sons, ages three and two. I work in the state university in our place and just live in another college. I have been suffering for six years loving a man who didn't love me back. He's brought nothing but pain since I started living with him.

At first, I prayed that my family would accept him... he has no stable job, no permanent address and he even lied to them about his real name. They say everything, I will forget him, hoping he'll change.

For six years he'd come home at the break of dawn, drunk. He loved to hit his friends more than his family. Many times, I found him messages from girls on his cellphone.

He told me in 2006 without any financial support, but I got him back when he returned four months later during Christmas of 2006.

My life became more terrible because he continued his gambling, smoking and drinking.

In 2007, he left me again and hasn't come back. He's a drunkard. I don't have anybody to share my problems with. I cannot sleep. I'm emotionally physically mentally broken down. I don't want to be like him, with no money.

Lifetime of Memories

There's no other celebration more beautiful than Valentine's Day. It's a day of love, romance, and passion. It's a day of love, romance, and passion. It's a day of love, romance, and passion.

The Power of Valentine's

Valentine's Day is a day of love, romance, and passion. It's a day of love, romance, and passion. It's a day of love, romance, and passion. It's a day of love, romance, and passion.

"If I wish for the best of love, play on..."
"The way to a man's heart is through his stomach..."
"Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a costly banquet where it is not..."
"For he on honey-dew hath fed..."

The connection between quality and love is a well-known fact. It's the art of connecting the heart and the mind, the art of connecting the heart and the mind, the art of connecting the heart and the mind.
